Sounds of the Wild: Nighttime

by Maurice Pledger

I like it because it teaches you all about night time animals and plays the sounds they make.

Nighttime is hardly quiet. It's filled with a world of strange and curious sounds. Incredible pop-up panoramas and mysterious animal sounds give a glimpse into the mysterious, after-dark world. Journey to the European woodland, and hear the calls of tawny owls on the hunt, then it's off to the sunset shadows of the Mediterranean where they can listen to noisy cicadas. The moonlit tour continues on to the Rocky Mountains, the Everglades and the Malaysian jungle, rumbling with the majestic roar of the Indo-Chinese tiger.
